

Transition Recommendations for the Next Presidential Term

FROM THE EVERY CHILD DESERVES A FAMILY CAMPAIGN

Updated: December 2020

THE NEED

Discrimination is widespread and entrenched in the child welfare system, impacting children, families of origin, kin, and prospective foster and adoptive parents who are lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender or questioning and Two Spirit (LGBTQ+2S) and gender nonconforming, who are Black, Indigenous, and other people of color, who live with disabilities, who are religious minorities or secular, who are immigrants or language minorities and those at intersectional identities. Addressing systemic racism, discrimination and disproportionality in the child welfare system is essential for improving outcomes for and the well-being, health, and safety of children and their families.

The priority in child welfare should be providing the supports necessary to keep children with their families of origin, including measures to eliminate disproportionality in removals --including for LGBTQ+2S parents--and measures to address family conflict and safety related to a child's sexual orientation and gender identity or expression. When children cannot remain with their families of origin, the priority should be for children to be placed in settings that affirm and reflect their complex social identities, including race, tribal affiliation, religion, and sexual orientation and gender identity or expression. All placements must be affirming for children of all genders, sexual orientations, and gender identity and expression, as children and youth may be questioning and developing these identities over the course of their lifespan.

For too long, there have been far too few supports for families of origin and relatives. This failure, and the lack of affirming placements, has led to horrific levels of placement instability, poor outcomes and dramatic overrepresentation in care of LGBTQ+2S children; those who are Black, Indigenous, and other children of color; children from low-income families; and, particularly, those with intersectional identities. It is impossible to imagine achieving major improvements in system-involved children's and families' well-being without addressing these failings.

In particular:

- Research has shown that LGBTQ+ and Two Spirit (LGBTQ+2S) children and children who are gender nonconforming in foster care (an estimated 30–34 percent of foster youth)<sup>1</sup> experience twice the rate of mistreatment in care as their non-LGBTQ+2S counterparts, and worse outcomes related to placement instability (longer stays in congregate care and multiple placements, and lack of placements affirming of the child's identity); homelessness; hospitalization for emotional reasons; criminal justice involvement; and being trafficked. LGBTQ+2S youth of color report higher rates of placement instability and poor outcomes than their white counterparts.<sup>2</sup>

- Numerous studies document the shortage of qualified and available homes for the over 400,000 youth in the child welfare system and many youth subsequently live in residential facilities rather than in family-like settings and age out of care without a permanent family.<sup>3</sup> Although same-sex couples are seven times more likely to foster or adopt than their different-sex counterparts,<sup>4</sup> and are likely to foster and adopt special populations including older children, children with disabilities, children with behavioral health needs, many child-placing agencies refuse to serve same-sex couples and LGBTQ+2S prospective parents. This, as well as refusals to serve single, religious minority, and secular parents has resulted in a reduction of the pool of qualified and available homes for youth in the child welfare system who need placement on a temporary or permanent basis. As news spreads about discrimination in child welfare, it serves to deter or delay prospective foster parents in other service areas who fear discrimination and are thus hesitant to apply.<sup>5</sup> It also sends a negative message about LGBTQ+2S people to children and youth in the child welfare system about the agency's values and who they consider "worthy", including who is, and who is not, considered fit to be a parent. Such discriminatory messages by child-serving agencies carry negative consequences for the social, behavioral, and mental health of LGBTQ+2S children they serve.<sup>6</sup> Such discriminatory messages also place LGBTQ+2S parents at greater risk of involvement with the child welfare system, especially those who are Black, Indigenous or other people of color or low-income, whose families and children are already vastly overrepresented in state child welfare systems. The priority in child welfare should be on providing the supports necessary to keep children with their families of origin. When removal is required, barring discrimination in foster care and adoption will increase the number of homes available to foster children waiting for foster and adoptive families, while reducing the negative messages about LGBTQ+2S people sent to children, families, and prospective foster parents in the system.

- Racial disparities exist at every stage of child welfare decision-making. Black families are more likely to be reported to the child abuse hotline and investigated for child abuse and neglect; more likely to have cases against them substantiated and to have their children removed from their care, and are subjected to termination of parental rights at higher rates than White parents. Once in foster care, Black children generally receive inferior services and are kept out of their homes for longer periods of time than their white counterparts.<sup>7</sup> Thirty-three percent of children in foster care are Black, but they make up only 15 percent of the child population, despite the fact that federal studies indicate that child abuse and neglect is lower for Black families than it is for whites.<sup>8</sup> Similarly, where abuse has been reported American Indian/Alaska Native children are two times more likely to be investigated, two times more likely to have allegations of abuse or neglect substantiated, and four times more likely to be placed in foster care than White children. This disproportionality has increased annually since 2010.<sup>9</sup>

- Parents with disabilities and their families are overrepresented in the child welfare system. While parents with disabilities make up only 6.2 percent of all parents in the United States, a recent study found that 19 percent of children in foster care have a parent with a disability.<sup>10</sup>

Individuals with disabilities who are seeking to foster or adopt a child also encounter significant barriers.

- Black lesbian and bisexual mothers are four times more likely to have lost their children to the state in child welfare proceedings than their non-LGB counterparts.<sup>11</sup>
- Eleven states have passed foster care and adoption license to discriminate laws or policies allowing agencies to turn away prospective LGBTQ+2S foster and adoptive parents (as well as single, religious minority, and secular parents), decreasing the number of urgently needed foster homes, as well as decreasing the number of affirming placements for LGBTQ+2S and religious minority foster children. Several of these laws may also allow discrimination against and service denials to LGBTQ+2S youth.<sup>12</sup>
- Data collection on LGBTQ+2S and tribal youth and families in the system is lacking for states, tribes, and territories to determine baseline data and outcomes from these groups who are dramatically overrepresented in care and suffer worse outcomes. Such data collection is urgently needed to track progress for improving outcomes locally and nationally, and for accountability in serving the needs of all youth and families, including those living at intersectional identities.

NEEDED COMPONENTS

Necessary components for addressing the needs outlined above include:

- Providing and enforcing nondiscrimination protections for and resources, as detailed below, to increase affirming and supportive services and placements for LGBTQ+2S children, parents, and families and those at the intersections of race, ethnicity, sex, religion, age, gender and gender identity and expression, sexual orientation, marital status or partnership, disability, citizenship or immigration status, national origin, tribal affiliation, and language, in Child Abuse Prevention and Treatment Act, and Social Security Title IV-B and IV-E funded services.
- Combatting discrimination in child welfare against parents and relatives in families of origin, including against LGBTQ+2S and gender nonconforming parents and relatives; Black, Indigenous, and other parents and relatives of color; low-income parents and relatives; parents and relatives with disabilities; and those with intersectional identities.

- Combatting discrimination and improving care, services, and outcomes for the 30-34% of young people in foster care who identify as LGBTQ+2S or are gender nonconforming; for Black, Indigenous and other children of color; children with disabilities; and those with intersectional identities.
- Combatting discrimination against current and prospective LGBTQ+2S and gender nonconforming foster and adoptive parents and kinship care providers, Black, Indigenous, and parents and kin of color, and those with intersectional identities. This will increase affirming temporary and permanent families to foster children and homes that reflect the pool of children in care, including those who identify as LGBTQ+2S or who are gender nonconforming, Black, Indigenous and children of color, and those with intersectional identities. It also could increase needed family placements for children with disabilities and children with behavioral health needs, as research has found that LGBTQ+2S adults “may be more willing [to adopt these children] than heterosexual adults.”<sup>13</sup>

RECOMMENDATIONS

Actions Recommended in the First 100 Days

1. Announce White House staff position to coordinate interagency work impacting the lives of LGBTQ+2S youth and families, and provide White House support for appointees.
2. Revoke/Rescind 84 FR 63831 - RIN 0991-AC16 (HHS Grants Rule) if a final rule has been issued and rescind 84 FR 63809, RIN 0991-AC16, the Notice of Nonenforcement ceasing enforcement of 45 CFR 75.101(f), 75.110(a), 75.300(c) and (d), 75.305(a), 75.365, 75.414(c) and (f), and 75.477.
3. Issue an all agency memo asking that agency heads prioritize funding recommendations related to LGBTQ+2S children and families for the president's budget.
4. Pass the Equality Act.
5. Pass the Do No Harm Act.
6. Increase Chafee funding to at least $500 million annually for young people with lived experience in foster care to improve the transition to adulthood. Increase the federal share of Title IV-E funding to 75% for permanency and transition to adulthood services. Increase accountability for youth engagement and leadership in individual decision making in their cases and in service delivery.
7. If possible, carry out regulatory recommendations below through the Congressional Review Act.

Legislative Recommendations

4. Pass the Every Child Deserves a Family Act. See this section by section summary.
5. Build on the Family First Prevention Services Act to allow the use of Title IV-E funds more broadly for prevention services that are designed to keep families together, including interventions

Regulatory Recommendations

Reverse or rescind:

10. 84 FR 63831 - RIN 0991-AC16, the HHS grants regulation repromulgating Grants Regulation 45 CFR 75.300\(c\) and \(d\) and eliminating broad nondiscrimination protections in all HHS grants programs including child welfare, if the final rule has been issued (the final rule was not issued as of December 11, 2020);

tion-agency-policies-practices-and-attitudes/

11. 84 FR 63809, RIN 0991-AC16, the Notice of Nonenforcement ceasing enforcement of 45 CFR 75.101(f), 75.110(a), 75.300(c) and (d), 75.305(a), 75.365, 75.414(c) and (f), and 75.477, and ceasing enforcement of broad nondiscrimination protections in all HHS grants programs including child welfare;

12. The waiver to the Grants Regulation 45 CFR 75.300\(c\) HHS granted to South Carolina. HHS should also rescind the waiver granted to the Governor of South Carolina on January 23, 2019 granting an exception to faith-based foster care agencies receiving federal funding to the portion of the Grants Regulation 45 CFR 75.300(c) barring discrimination based on religion. While that waiver did not grant an exception to nondiscrimination requirements based on sexual orientation and gender identity (later potentially eliminated under the Grants Regulation above), South Carolina foster care agencies have used it to justify turning away qualified LGBTQ foster parents as well as those who are Jewish, Catholic, secular, and of other faiths than born-again Protestant;

13. 85 FR 28410 - RIN 0970-AC72, the AFCARS final rule effective July 13, 2020 eliminating LGBTQ+2S and Indian Child Welfare Act (ICWA) data elements from HHS' foster care data collection system. Add voluntary gender identity data collection for foster youth and foster and adoptive parents and guardians to the AFCARS final rule effective , incorporating best practices outlined in #20 below.

White House Recommendations<sup>14</sup>

14. Establish a White House-level staff position to coordinate interagency work impacting the lives of LGBTQ+2S youth and families, and provide White House support for appointees.
15. Issue an all agency memo asking that agency heads prioritize funding recommendations related to LGBTQ+2S children and families for the president's budget.

HHS Recommendations

16. See Regulatory Recommendations 10-13 above.
17. Establish a Senior Advisor to the Assistant Secretary of ACF at a GS 15 or higher position to focus on the needs of LGBTQ+2S youth who are in or have been in the child welfare system or Run Away and Homeless Youth Act programs.
18. Stand up a National Resource Center for Safety, Well-being, Placement Stability, and Permanency for LGBTQ+2S Foster

Youth at HHS, funded through Title IV-B, with a commensurate increase in appropriations.

19. Create, post, and circulate FAQs, blogs, Dear Colleague letters, and/or guidance explaining sexual orientation and gender identity and expression-inclusive nondiscrimination protections for HHS-funded programs including child welfare services and how to submit claims for cases of discrimination based on these characteristics.

- Ensure that nonbinary people are explicitly included and provided protections in these materials.
- Ensure that this guidance clarifies that families of origin, kin, or foster and adoptive families who affirm their transgender or gender nonconforming children's identities are not discriminated against in removals, placements and custody proceedings.
- Ensure that where sex discrimination is prohibited, that these protections cover discrimination based on sexual orientation and gender identity based on the Supreme Court Bostock opinion.

20. Ensure affirming and supportive services and placements in child welfare by requiring non-discriminatory and culturally and linguistically sensitive services and staff training for staff in funded programs, respecting the complex social identities of service recipients including their race, ethnicity, sex, religion, creed, color, age, gender, gender identity, gender expression, sexual orientation, marital status or partnership, disability, genetic information, citizenship or immigration status, national origin, tribal affiliation, intersex traits, socioeconomic status, and language, and those with intersectional identities. This could be based on the Runaway and Homeless Youth Act (RHYA) implementing regulations 45 CFR 1351.22.

- Ensure these protections and affirming services under 15 and 16 are available for those deemed beneficiaries (youth) and those who are not (families of origin, kin providing or seeking to provide kinship care, and foster and adoptive parents).
- Provide initial and ongoing training and coaching to all child welfare personnel on gender identity development, gender inclusive practices, and gender affirming care and services, including that a family of origin's choice to affirm a child's gender identity or expression is not abuse or neglect.

21. Require data collection on sexual orientation and gender identity and expression (SOGIE) of foster children, parents, and guardians by: integrating questions about SOGIE and discriminatory experiences into existing demographic data collection, intake, service planning and case review processes; enforcing nondiscrimination protections based on sexual orientation and gender identity and expression within these data collection processes; training child welfare workers to collect this information respectfully and accurately before integrating these questions into current data collection systems; and maintaining confidentiality when recording and sharing this information.<sup>15</sup>
22. Require full implementation of the Indian Child Welfare Act.
  - Collect data to track this implementation and hold jurisdictions accountable.<sup>16</sup>
23. Utilize Title IV-E funding to provide, and require training of caseworkers, all foster care staff, judges, ad litem attorneys, and others on ensuring service delivery and training which is affirming of the complex social identities of children and families for all groups enumerated in #20 above.
24. Provide technical assistance to states, territories, tribes, and agencies for 20-22 above.
25. Protect the well-being of children by prohibiting any attempt to disparage, “change,” or degrade a young person’s sexual orientation or gender identity or expression as well as prohibiting forcible religious conversion of foster youth.
  - Require child welfare personnel to intervene to protect children from any attempt to disparage, “change,” or degrade a young person’s sexual orientation or gender identity or expression regardless of the nature of the intervention or the credentials of the person administering it. Workers should be alert to any approach or intervention that treats gender diversity or sexual orientation as a defect, or suggests that a person’s gender identity or sexual orientation can or should be changed. If necessary, agencies should seek a protective order from the juvenile court to stop these practices.
  - Religious attendance for foster children should be optional; agencies should fund alternative childcare or activities for children while foster parents attend religious services.
26. Conduct a 50-state study on policies,

- practices, and procedures that deny, delay, or create disparate burdens to an individual's participation in child welfare programs or services - and on child removal and reunification rates - based on the family's or child's sex, sexual orientation, gender identity or expression, and include an examination of the impact of intersectional identities including race, religion, marital status, disability, national origin, or tribal affiliation. Identify baseline data on representation in child welfare and outcomes for LGBTQ+2S foster children, families of origin, foster parents, and kin. Identify research needs and promising practices for improving care to these groups including to address disproportionality in child welfare removals and disproportionality in poorer outcomes while in child welfare custody, such as delays in reunification and other permanency outcomes.
27. Ensure research into evidence-based practices required for funding under the Title IV-E Prevention Program and other child welfare reform priorities is culturally competent and includes programs that provide services directed at LGBTQ+2S youth and families.
  28. Support research on why/how disproportionality occurs in child welfare, funded through Title IV-B.
  29. Establish an advisory committee for ACF made up of LGBTQ+2S youth in care, LGBTQ+2S youth who were formerly in care, LGBTQ+2S foster and adoptive parents, and LGBTQ+2S foster parents and relative caregivers. Address the specific needs of trans and gender non-conforming foster youth.
  30. Host a biennial convening on the needs of LGBTQ+2S foster youth and families, funded through Title IV-B.
  31. Encourage the adoption and implementation of practice models such as the Family Acceptance Project Model, which promotes positive development and healthy futures for LGBTQ+2S youth through counseling sessions with the youth and their families, wellness checks, training, and/or support.
  32. Fund demonstration projects for prevention models that deliberately address reasons that LGBTQ+2S children enter care using Title IV-B funding, with a commensurate increase in appropriations.
  33. Research and identify promising practices to reduce overuse of psychotropic medications and develop and support alternative treatments. Provide technical assistance to help states implement the "medical home" requirements under Title IV-B planning.

34. Provide incentive and practice models for recruiting, supporting, and retaining LGBTQ+2S and other underrepresented foster and adoptive families to ensure a pool of foster families that is reflective of the diversity of children in the system using Title IV-B funding, with a commensurate increase in appropriations.
35. Eliminate the Conscience and Religious Freedom Division of the Office of Civil Rights and re-integrate religious discrimination protection enforcement within the Civil Rights Division.
36. To improve child welfare services and protections for LGBTQ+2S children, particularly those who are transgender and gender nonconforming and nonbinary, ensure affirming care by child welfare agencies funded by HHS, and develop promising practices, including through items the steps listed above, by:
- Working closely with TGNC children who are developmentally able to talk about their needs to identify a placement in which they feel most comfortable to live safely and authentically, and which is most consistent with their gender identity as they currently understand and describe it.
    - Consulting children on their placement preferences in making placement decisions for single-sex congregate care and other child welfare facilities, and placing them by their gender identity unless they prefer a different placement.
  - Developing a requirement that LGBTQ+2S children be moved to an affirming placement within a specific, short amount of time if they report that a placement is non-affirming.
  - Providing comprehensive transition related health care for transgender foster youth, and connecting LGBTQ+2S foster youth with LGBTQ+2S friendly healthcare providers including by requiring child welfare agencies to:
    - Contract with clinicians that provide gender-related care that follows established standards of care. In particular, the health and behavioral health care providers that they contract must be competent to diagnose and treat gender dysphoria by focusing on alleviating distress and facilitating their gender transition in whatever manner is developmentally appropriate.
    - Ensure that transgender and gender nonconforming children have access to competent health and behavioral health clinicians who are experienced in providing gender-affirming care, and who work with children and their caregivers to determine the appropriate treatment.

- Providing LGBTQ+2S foster youth with affirming sexual health education and PrEP.
- Requiring caseworkers of LGBTQ+2S crossover (child welfare / juvenile justice/RHYA) youth to remain involved, particularly with detained youth, and to advocate for appropriate placement and services within the juvenile justice system.
- Ensuring sibling unification.
- Encouraging states to update their Foster Youth Bill of Rights policies to include SOGIE protections and affirming services
- Ensuring the ability of youth to pursue legal action should a right be violated (this must be addressed by statute, and is included for LGBTQ+2S and religious minority youth in the Every Child Deserves a Family Act - see #4 above).

37. Require data collection and the development of outcome measures related to youth engagement in case planning and in court.

38. Act to improve services to older foster youth, among whom LGBTQ+2S and Black, Indigenous and youth of color are overrepresented by:

- Establishing a high-profile position within ACF to focus on the needs of older youth who are in or have been in the child welfare system.
- Hosting a convening on the needs of older youth, especially those who age out of foster care, with a focus on permanency, connections, education and employment.
- Expanding affirming family-based alternatives for teens currently in group homes by providing research for service models, start up funds, financial incentives and family support services. Incorporate youth choice in recognition that some youth currently prefer LGBTQ+2S-affirming congregate care facilities when their other choice is a non-affirming foster family placement.
- Mandating the provision of extended foster care through age 21, and allowing greater flexibility on school and work requirements for extended care and to expedite re-entry into care.

These recommendations have been prepared and distributed by:

The Every Child Deserves a Family Campaign promotes the best interests of all children in the foster care and adoption system by supporting families of origin, by promoting family acceptance of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, queer and questioning and Two Spirit children (LGBTQ+2S), and by increasing the access of all children to affirming, loving and stable homes. The campaign works to ensure safe and supportive care for all children and families, including LGBTQ+2S children and families, Black, Indigenous, and other children and families of color, children, parents, and relatives with disabilities, and those with intersectional identities.

The Every Child Deserves a Family Campaign is a project of Family Equality, the nation's leading advocate for LGBTQ families and those who wish to form them.
